Margret, Stacy

Can you advise regarding availability towards the end of next week in Los Angeles for deposition and, if appropriate, follow up on settlement dialog Margret proposed? Thanks.

Margret, Stacy

I have spoken with my client concerning NexTag's request to have a "business to business" discussion with Louis Vuitton concerning this claim. Louis Vuitton is agreeable in principle. Given time zone issues, such a discussion would have to occur relatively early California time and my client is conducting an internal discussion concerning participants and their availability for such a call in the near future.

We understand that participation from NexTag's side will be CEO and/or CFO level and that all communications will be privileged and inadmissible as provided by the Federal Rules of Evidence to encourage a more candid dialog on relevant issues. I also understand that there will not be participation on such a call by outside/litigation counsel. If any of this is inaccurate please let me know.

On a related note and in the interest of advancing this dialog I can advise that Louis Vuitton can make Nikolay Livadkin available for deposition later this month should NexTag (i) withdraw its motion; (ii) pay 1/2 of the deponent's out-of-pocket travel expenses and (iii) take the deposition in Southern California. If this is acceptable, I will work with you to arrange mutually agreeable dates.
